Another Friday, another fire: arson at the Port?

By Steve Marschke

For the second Friday in a row, a fire on small vessels at the Port of Sacramento has caused major damage and required a major firefighting effort from the West Sacramento Fire Department.

Last Friday's fire was nearly a repeat of the previous week's disaster which had caused about $250,000 in uninsured losses for Lou Watson and his company, which had planned to sell the six burned barges for about $40,000 apiece.

"Six were either burned up or badly damaged," Watson said Tuesday.

The barges are made of a "hard to burn" honeycomb-core fiberglass, Watson said.

"I've used welding torches on them, and they burn when the acetylene torch is right there, but when you take the torch away, it stops."

However, when a fire begins in the combustible cargo within one of the barges -- as happened with one of his on March 22 -- a blaze can take off.

The most recent fire, on March 29, started on a 52' catamaran boat built by John Stubbe (and used as his home), and then spread to several barges also owned by Stubbe. All the vessels were located across the shallow bay of Lake Washington at the northern end of the Port of Sacramento's ship turning basin.

"That boat represented conservatively $150,000 worth of money and work," said Stubbe. "I also lost a $20,000 compressor and other tools."

One barge was destroyed, one was heavily damaged, and one was more lightly damaged in that blaze.

"The fire department was there instantly because they had the practice the previous week," added Stubbe, who was not at the port at the time of the blaze. "They said the catamaran was already gone."

Witnesses said it looked like large quantities of "accelerants" such as gasoline had been used on the catamaran because of the way it appeared to explode with fire, Stubbe said.

In August, arson destroyed six barges Stubbe had in the Delta. All his losses are uninsured, he said.

Police and fire officials are investigating both West Sacramento blazes as possible arson, but no suspects have been arrested.

A newspaper report saying that two juveniles had been detained after the second fire was an exaggeration, said Detective Ray Bombardier of the West Sacramento Police Department.

Two juveniles were seen near the fire last Friday, he said, and were contacted.

"But according to the patrol officer," Bombardier commented, "these juveniles were seen running to the fire to look at it, and not running away from it."

The two are not suspects.

Watson said his barges were built by Boeing. They are marked "PFE," for Pacific Far East, and intended to be used for bringing cargo into shallow Asian ports where ships could not go.

Possible chlorine discharges from treatment plant

By Steve Marschke

The West Sacramento sewage treatment plant on South River Road has received several new "notices of violation" from state water officials, but the city's treatment personnel think the alleged chemical problem stems from a faulty measuring system at the plant. The notices said that the plant was releasing too much chlorine in its discharges into the river.

"We had a couple of chlorine residual excesses," said Mayor Greg Potnick, who was briefed on the problem by city staff. "We've replaced the monitoring equipment because we're not convinced it was a real chlorine problem."

Mayor sees year of construction

By Steve Marschke

Mayor Greg Potnick is bullish on 1996.

"I think the community is going to see some major changes," he said Tuesday. "Some of these things we've been waiting for are going to bear fruit this year. I have a general feeling of optimism."

Among the items Potnick looks forward to watching:

Panhandler in coma

A 58-year old panhandler remains in "guarded" condition and in a coma after being assaulted near the Low Cost Liquor store in the Riverbend Center near Sacramento Ave. and Kegle Dr. on March 20.

Detective Ray Bombardier of the West Sacramento Police Department said that there appeared to have been no argument or provocation before Ulysses Adams was struck by an unknown suspect. Police are searching for a tall, white male adult who was wearing a red baseball cap and driving a beige Ford Maverick with a vinyl top.

"(Adams) panhandled out there," said Bombardier. "According to a witness, the victim walked up to the suspect and the guy struck him. I don't know if the guy hit him with something."

The blow caused head injuries.

Anyone with information is asked to call Bombardier at 373-5870.

Colors of the Ukraine

CORINNE VASI AND DAUGHTER LAURA show some of this year's ambitious Easter egg work

By Steve Marschke

They're not Ukrainian.

But that doesn't stop the Vasi family of West Sacramento from practicing the Ukrainian art of psyanka -- the delicate decoration of Easter eggs.

Corinne Vasi, an instructional aide at Alyce Norman Elementary School, said she learned the craft at a workshop put on by Mary Hanan, a teacher at the school who is of Ukrainian descent.

"You use beeswax for outlining your design on the eggs, then dip it into a succession of dyes," she explained.

Daughters Marie (a River City High sophomore) and Laura (a seventh grader at Golden State) have helped to create a selection of highly individual, multi-colored and sometimes intricate designs on their holiday eggs.

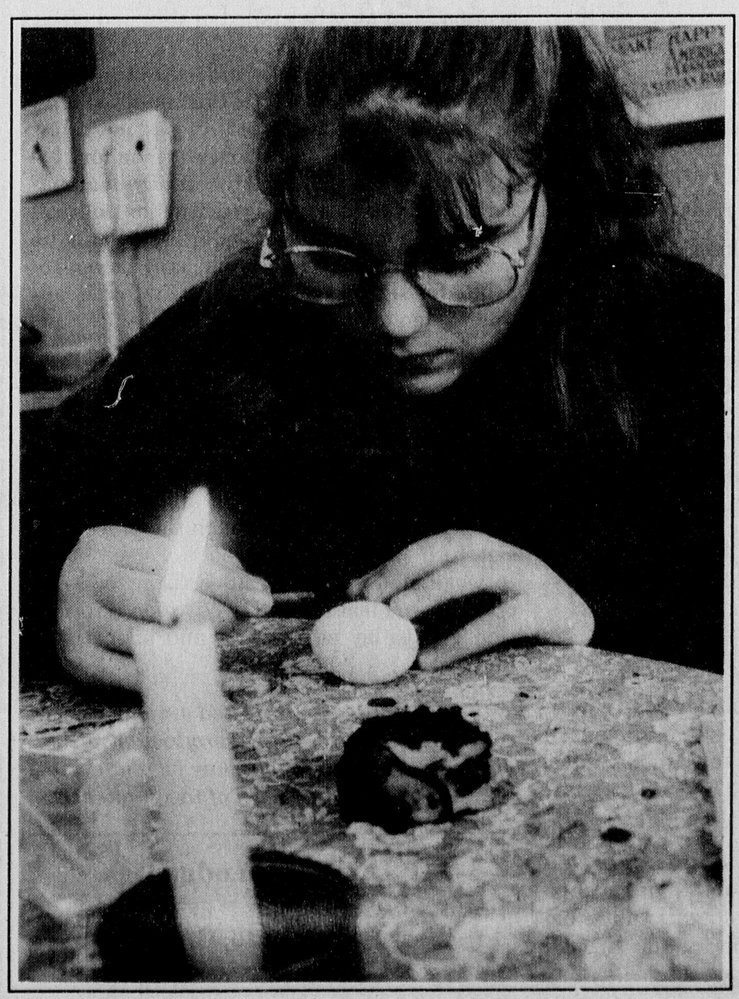
They begin by dying the eggs one color, and then use a stylus heated by a candle to melt beeswax from a block and apply it to areas of the egg they wish to remain that color. Then they dip it into the next color of dye, and again apply beeswax over areas they wish to remain in that shade.

The dye doesn't stick to waxed areas.

At the end, their egg appears to be a single solid color. But when they hold it next to the candle, the beeswax patternwork melts away, and voila -- the pattern emerges.

The eggs at the Vasi household ran the gamut from cartoonish to ornately designed "stained glass" window-type designs.

It is the second year the family has practiced the craft.



Laura Vasi stencils a design of beeswax onto an egg as part of the Ukrainian egg decorating practice.
Where the wax sticks, the dye doesn't hold -- so after a succession of waxing and dying, you merely melt off all the wax from the egg to reveal your multi-colored design.

A quick lesson on pigology

By T.J. Smoot

I caught part of the Academy Awards the other night, and I'm always struck with Hollywood's comments on what they feel should be significant to us as a country. If they're not preaching this to us in the movies, they're telling us to our faces. Apparently, this year a talking pig was important, at least important enough to get an award. Now to be fair, I never did see the pig-movie (Babe), and as a result, I am pig-ignorant about the plot. But from the clips shown, I'm reticent to plop down hard earned moola to watch a pig actually move its mouth and talk. Excuse meeeeeeee. Does anyone else besides me know anything about pigs? Let me summarize. First, pigs grow up. Then you eat them. That just about covers it.

Now, I can sympathize with those Southern Californians who may suffer from pigology deprivation because when I was but a youth, my family carted me off from the blissful beaches of Ventura to a small parcel of acreage in Missouri 8 miles outside of a tiny town of "3,568 Friendly People" (at least, that's what the sign said). When we moved there, I knew next to nothing about pigs. I only knew that one end ate, and the other end...well, it didn't eat. But my nearest neighbor (1/2 mile away), Marvin Black, knew a lot about pigs. He raised them. Then he ate them. His pigs never talked. It was that simple. Especially to them farm folks. Now, if we were to see a pig talk and move its mouth, we Missourians would move the straw from the right side of our mouths to the left and immediately conclude that this talking pig had mutated with some alien lifeform from Venus. Either that, or this pig was part of a scary monster movie.

Remember those 1950s monster movies? I used to watch them on Saturday afternoons. You know, zombies waddling around the graveyard going "mooolf, meeeelf, muuulf" (Translation: Director, director, this wrap is too tight!). I remember one movie in particular that I found particularly frightful. It was that movie where some absent-minded (most likely part-time) research scientist accidently spilled alien radioactive water on left-over coffee crystals in the kitchen sink. Quietly, while his back was turned, this small pile of crystals grew through the roof, fell over and crushed him by surprise.

This didn't satiate the crystal's appetite for mayhem. It grew and grew, thriving on ordinary tap water. It was merciless and without morals. When it got 40 stories tall, it fell in on itself and crushed whatever lay in its path. Schools--CRUNCH! Churches--BANG! Pig farms--OINK! Methodically, it crunched down the street, right through city hall. Women screamed. Babies cried. Dogs barked and scratched themselves behind their ears. When it looked like there was no stopping the crystals from reaching the local reservoir, local officials did what local officials always did in these movies when they needed ultimate help...they called in the ARMY.

I always felt sorry for those guys. You just knew they would never win. All their foes were too fantastic for modern weapons. I bet even they knew they were sunk when they were called in to confront and eliminate the likes of Godzilla, six thousand gargantuan ants, the 60-story incredible growing woman, and aliens that would posses their hosts by metamorphosing into maltshop milkshakes and awaiting unsuspecting teens to consume them. How hideous! (Mrs. Smoot saw this movie early one a.m. when she was nursing baby Smoot. Shaken, she crept into bed and wanted a comforting hug. Surely I would protect her from the sinister, ALIEN VANILLA SHAKE! Empathetic to a tee, I teased her about some imaginary spiders on her side of the bed and turned over to resume snoring.) Where was I? Oh yeah, the ARMY. Those poor guys. Most of the time you just saw jeep after jeep with machine guns racing in-line (to their doom) to shoot hot lead into these denizens from hell. More often than not, half of these brave souls would end up squished or eaten head first with their legs dangling from said denizens' mouths.

In this coffee crystal movie, Sergeant Smith yells at Private Jones, "Jones! Get that howitzer over here and blast that coffee crystal sucker back to Venus before it gets up to 30 stories! SHOOT IT! SHOOT IT! SHOOT IT!" Jones stutters, somewhat befuddled, while looking into his ammo box, "Wha...what kind of ammo do you want me to use?" Smith glares unbelievingly and yells, "What the hay are you talking about? Whaddaya mean what kind of ammo do you use? Use the kind that shoots stuff. Come on buckwheat! SHOOT IT! SHOOT IT! SHOOT IT!" Jones watches the crystals grow to 40 stories, crash and start to grow all over again. The troops are only a block away from their inevitable fate, i.e., being crushed head first with their legs dangling. Jones is beginning to panic, and he tries to explain, "I...I can't use regular ammo on decaf crystals! If it's decaf, I gotta use orange ammo! If it's Irish Cream, I gotta use the green ammo, if it's hazelnut, I gotta use the light brown ammo. I have to match the ammo with the type of crystal, or it just don't do any good!" Smith has one eye on the ammo box and one glued on the growing crystal towers, and holding his head, he screams, "OK! OK! OK! How do I know what kind of crystal it is?" The crunching gets closer, and Closer, and CLOSER!

Jones is frantic and foams at the mouth. His helmet straps swing wildly as he desperately explains, "Look at it! Do you see any kind of orange or green hue around the edges? Does it smell nutty? Hurry, Sarge. If it gets any closer, I'm outa here!" The Sergeant yelled at the Private, "Stand your ground!" Smith crept a little closer while squinting and smelling for a nutty aroma. Right then a splinter crystal fell off from 28 stories high and crunched him, leaving his legs dangling.

Now, I don't recall how or why the crystals stopped growing, but I can tell you that that kind of movie is scary enough to make any eight-year-old check the kitchen sink for coffee grounds. After all, crystals growing 40 stories tall and crashing is definitely unnatural. . . kinda like talking pigs.

A first for high school drama:

RC thespians will be first to prduce drama

Exciting news for the students at River City High School and the community: the author of Kindertransport, Diane Samuels, has authorized the premier production of her play next year by River City High School students.

"The reputation of the River City Thespians for producing plays not common in the high school repertoire has been recognized as far away as England and Ms. Samuels is taking a personal interest in the production," wrote Roy Engoron, drama teacher at River City, in the announcement on the playbill for The Nerd last month. "River City has to its credit two West Coast premiers (The Passion of Dracula and Whodunitt); one playwright involved production (The Dolly); and four high school production premiers (One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Equus, Whose Life is it Anyway, and Love Letters). Kindertransport is a poignantly written account of a young Jewish girl who is sent to England in 1938 from Nazi Germany and those close to her."

Watch for the announcement of dates.

Weed Abatement Season

Spring is just around the corner. Days are getting longer and warmer, baseball is in the air and weeds are beginning to emerge from a winter of hibernation. It won't be long before those weeds grow dry in the summer sun and become a fire danger.

In an effort to reduce the summer fire danger due to uncontrolled weed growth, the West Sacramento Fire Department's Weed Abatement Program is scheduled to begin by the end of March. Notification to owners of problem parcels is set to begin April 10. Property owners will then have thirty days to abate their property on a voluntary basis. If at the end of that thirty day period the danger still exists, a City weed abatement contractor will clean the property and the owner will have the cost of the abatement added to the property's tax record. The owner will be charged according to this fee table (right).

PARCEL SIZE	FEE
0 to less than 1/2 acre	$52.09
1/2 to less than 1 acre	$69.45
1 acre or more	$60.19
50' Fire break / linear ft.	11¢
Flail mowing	$67.13/hour
Hand mowing & or weed eater	23.15/hour
Compact debris removal per 1/2 yard	$11.57

An additional administrative fee of 20% will be added to these amounts.

All fees, with the exception of the administrative fee, are passed directly to the weed abatement contractor for his services. The City of West Sacramento receives no portion of these funds.

The fire department encourages the citizens of West Sacramento to be proactive in their efforts to reduce the summer fire danger. It's never to early to anticipate the potential of a dangerous situation. Anyone having questions concerning the City's Weed Abatement Program is encouraged to contact the Fire Prevention Bureau at 373-5807.

This column, written by City of West Sacramento staff, covers a variety of topics concerning the City of West Sacramento's government and services. If you have a concern that you would like to see addressed in a future article, please send your questions to: Town Hall Talk c/o The News-Ledger, 816 Westacre Road, West Sacramento, CA 95691

Loss to Colfax ends blazing tennis streak

From River City High School

The streak is over. After beginning the 1996 tennis season with a school record tying eight match winning streak, the River City High School Tennis Team was finally defeated last week, 4 to 3 at Colfax. According to Raider Coach Dave Brooks, the streak equals the eight-in-a-row won by the 1983 boys team that went on to win back-to-back Golden Empire League championships. "I told them after the Colfax match that it had been a fun ride to 8 and 0," said Brooks. "It's the best start to a season that any team has ever had but now the streak is over and it's time to recharge the batteries and start a new one. And the way to do that is to remember how we got here -- a tremendous amount of hard work and taking one match at a time. We'll be ready for Golden Sierra."

Prior to Thursday's Colfax match, the Raiders shutout Marysville at home on Tuesday 7 to 0 and won a thrilling 5 to 2 match at Bear River on Wednesday. Highlights against Marysville included hard fought wins in boys singles by #1 Peter Santizo, 6-3, 7-5; and #2 Bounthay Bouttavong, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4; and a "double bagel" by the girls doubles team of Meuy Saechao and Aenoy Xayasone. Xayasone, in her first-ever varsity match, played well in place of Saechao's regular partner, Bethany Monroe, who was sick. It was the fourth consecutive Raider team shutout.

The next day, the team travelled to Lake of the Pines, near Auburn, to take on the defending G.E.L. Champion Bruins. The 1995 Bear River team had gone through the league season with a perfect 12 and 0 match record. After the Raider visit, such a season in no longer possible for the 1996 Bruins. Although Santizo and Bouttavong fell short in their boys singles matches, River City won the five other matches to shock the Bruins on their home courts. In girls singles, Santizo's sister Mirthala cruised to a 6-1, 6-2 win at #1 while #2 Khonthavy Phouanglasy also won easily 6-1, 6-1. The mixed doubles team of Douangchanh Lattasima and Jeff Wright triumphed 6-2, 6-2, Ty Fisher and Ahmad Fazel won in boys doubles 6-4, 6-2, and a still-ailing Monroe rejoined Saechao for a 6-4, 6-3 victory.

"It was a tremendous team effort that got us the win at Bear River," said Brooks. "It's a school located in an area where many kids grow up playing tennis at local private clubs. They have a German exchange student at #1 boys singles who could go unbeaten this year. We played with a lot of fire, a lot of heart. Unfortunately, we had to take another very long road trip the next day to Colfax and we were really exhausted. Three matches in three days, including back-to-back on the road against Bear River and Colfax."

In Thursday's match versus the Falcons, River City was up against a team which returned 9 of 10 varsity players from last year's G.E.L. second place squad. Having defeated the Raiders twice in '95 by 5-2 scores, the Falcons were heavily favored on their home courts, but R.C. nearly pulled out another huge win.

Using the same lineup as the previous day, Raider wins came in girls doubles, boys doubles, and at #2 girls singles where Phouanglasy remains unbeaten this season. In the #1 singles spots, Peter and Mirthala Santizo lost straight set matches to Matt Medlin and Erika Riedel who were last year's G.E.L. Most Valuable Players. Lattasima and Wright were defeated in mixed and Bouttavong lost a brilliant #2 boys singles match in three sets, 3-6, 6-3, 2-6.

This week, although the players are not in school because of Spring Break, the team has a pair of non-league matches scheduled for Thursday and Friday at Dixon and at Wood Creek.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The Kentucky Wildcats (34-2) are the 1996 NCAA champions, beating Syracuse 76-67. The Final Four MVP Tony Deck scored 24 points and a record-tying seven three-pointers.

Syracuse's 6'8" forward John Wallace didn't hurt his chances at being the NBA's number one pick in next year's draft. Wallace played a great tournament, scoring 29 points with ten rebounds in the final game.

The Sacramento Kings (32-41) are hanging on to the eighth and final spot in the Western Conference playoffs. The Kings have a three-game lead in the loss column over ninth-place Golden State and tenth place Denver. Wednesday, the Kings play in San Antonio, then return home to play Houston on Friday and Utah on Easter Sunday. The Kings have allowed an average of 96 points in their last six games and are 4-2. During their big slump, when they went 1-16, they allowed 106 points per contest. Defense wins games!!

Major league baseball started the 1996 season with a sad note on Monday, when 25-year veteran umpire John McSherry died of a heart attack in front of 50,000 Opening Day fans at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati. The game was postponed until the next day. The Giants and A's were bombed on their opening day games. The Giants gave up five home runs in their 10-8 loss to the Braves, and the A;s were mugged 9-6 in Las Vegas by the Blue Jays. It's going to be a long baseball season for Bay Area fans!

In NFL action, the 49ers cut seven-year veteran defensive end Dennis Brown and signed running back Johnny Johnson. The Oakland Raiders re-signed QB Jeff Hostetler. Dallas Cowboys all-time leading wide receiver Michael Irvin has a few legal problems to resolve before next season. Irvin was indicted on two counts of felony drug possession. Looks like some of Irvin's off-the-field endorsements (Nike, Southwest Airlines, etc.), which total over $1 million in 1996, might be history!

See ya next week!!

Reminding us where we come from

THE COUNTY OF YOLO HAS A MAP with all of the officially recognized historical buildings and sites in the various cities and areas of the county.

Markers show places of historical significance in virtually every corner of Yolo -- from the larger towns such as Davis and Woodland to the smaller communities of Zamora, Esparto and Rumsey.

Missing is West Sacramento.

There are no official historical sites in West Sacramento. This is not because the city of 30,000 has no history; it does have a colorful one, often tied to the river and its trades. West Sacramentans simply have not explored and championed their history to the degree others in Yolo have done. We have not preserved our collective memory of former canneries, former marinas, former social centers, notable architecture and neighborhoods.

A relatively new group, the West Sacramento Historical Society, is trying to change this and trying to educate the city about its roots. One of the group's first projects has been to collect old photographs and information and assemble it into an entertaining and attractive kiosk passers-by can browse for their enjoyment.

This kiosk was recently on display at "La Bou" near Jefferson and West Capitol. It has now moved to Wells Fargo Bank, where customers and visitors can spend a few moments with it anytime in the month of April.

"Until recently, I never knew West Sacramento had this kind of a rich history," one woman was overheard to say to a friend near the photo display at La Bou. "I enjoy learning about how this city used to be."

THE CITY OF WEST SACRAMENTO regularly passes out proclamations honoring people for this or that accomplishment, or this or that public service. Sometimes these proclamations are more earned and deserved than at other times.

Tonight, three of the people instrumental in bringing the history kiosk to fruition will be honored by a proclamation from the city council. They, and the rest of their group, have earned it.

Jeri Hughes-Wingfield, Thom Lewis and Louisa Vessell (along with the rest of the historical society) certainly have performed a valuable public service. Not only was it a difficult task to find and photograph over 200 old photos and turn some of them into an entertaining and informative civic lesson, but they may well have kicked off a new era of exploration into the city's roots and of a greater public appreciation for those roots.

City's anti-business policies causing local 'malaise'

From the West Sacramento Hotel & Motel Association

Two-thirds of the businesses out of compliance with the new sign ordinance are businesses other than motels such as banks, gas stations, markets and restaurants, and most of these businesses are out of compliance because their signs are too high for the 12-foot limitation of the ordinance. The West Sacramento Hotel/Motel Association brought this fact to the attention of the Chamber of Commerce, and they have joined with the association to ask the City's Zoning Task Force Commission to review the current sign ordinance for possible changes in the height requirement or to suggest other changes beneficial to businesses and the community.

Manhar Patel, president of the association, and owner of the Continental Motel, said, "We are not trying to day away with the ordinance, we think it is in general a good thing. It will cause businesses to improve the condition of their signs, but the height limitation for struggling businesses along West Capitol is totally ridiculous, and places an unfair burden upon business with little or no return.

"In order to have small business to survive the sign needs to be clearly visible to the motoring public. Small business must be able to sell their services."

The cost to lower a sign to the required 12-foot limitation can be as high as $20,000.

"Every time we ask the City for help with marketing we are refused," Patel went on to say, "so we promote our businesses as best we can, and the major part of that marketing is from our business signs. Now they want us to incur a huge cost, without any redevelopment or marketing assistance."

Daniel Wigon, director of the association, said, "It is time to take a realistic assessment of the economic situation facing small and medium businesses in West Sacramento. We are glad that the City Zoning Task Force will review this problem, but the underlying economic malaise of the downtown and other local businesses can be traced to development and planning policies of the city. The current sign ordinance places businesses along West Capitol Avenue in a no-win situation of increasing costs with little resulting benefit. How are businesses to improve if they are squeezed at every turn by the City?"

Kris Reddy, vice president, said, "Instead of helping to support the hotel and motel industry that has existed here for decades and has brought in huge tax benefits to the city, and much needed spinoff dollars directly to other businesses, the city has ignored our needs and plagued as with assessments and requirements that make the situation only worse for all of us."

The association believes that the sign ordinance needs a close examination, and a look at all the alternatives rather than any temporary fixes.

Bob Patel, board member, said, "If small business succeeds and the city helps promote business here, the benefits to the community will be immense."

The West Sacramento Hotel/Motel Association addressed the Zoning Task Force Commission meeting on Thursday, March 28, at 4:30 p.m. to bring the issue to discussion.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks, pollworkers

From an administritative standpoint, last week's election was the smoothest in memory with final results tallied even before midnight. This was due in no small part to the superior performance of the 500 Yolo County voters who served as precenct workers.

Voters who have never worked in a polling place often do not appreciate the complexity of the process, nor the safeguards that are built into it. Our pollworkers must keep track of a multitude of details -- not the least of which include tracking the ballots of eight different parties (and non-partisan voters) -- and, of course, their performance standard is 100%.

Particularly striking was participation in polling places by high school students: 7 percent of our pollworkers last week were high school students from all cities in the county. Here is a situation where the participation of our young people is an example of which many of us who are older can truly be proud.

Elections are the heart of our democracy, and democracy depends on everyone -- not just on the voters or on the candidates, but in Yolo County on those who devote their own personal time to supporting our democratic process on election day.

On behalf of the Elections Office and the residents of Yolo County, we extend our sincere 'thank you', and look forward to working with you all again in the future.

TONY BERNHARD
Yolo County Clerk

Early primaries

Although California moved its "primary for this presidential year" from early June to late March, the presidential choices were still already made by other states by the time our voters voted...since those states we jumped ahead of changed their laws and jumped back ahead of Californians.

Question: Since we're talking federal elections, and all states have the same general election date in November (by federal law, no doubt), why does not federal law mandate that all federal primaries be held on the same date? Why should voters in earlier primaries have a voice in the presidential selection process and later voters have no voice by law?

Maybe California lawmakers should file suit in Federal Court, challenging the inequities of nationwide elections not held simultaneously. This question and its importance is further amplified by modern-day technology and the speed with which news is delivered worldwide; thus, same-day primaries are the only fair way and all should be held much earlier, as in June. Having 230 days between primary decision day and general election is too much.

If we cannot attain a same-day national primary, maybe the next best way to achieve that goal is to push for "open primaries" in even more states...this should drive the leaders of both major parties "nuts." When enough Republicans are voting who the Democratic nominee shall be (and vice-versa), maybe Congress will be motivated to get together on this issue.

And with only a 40 percent turnout, as little as 21 percent (just over 1 in 5) can make decisions in our state for offices and issues other than the presidency -- our "late" vote doesn't count for that.

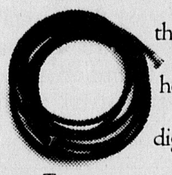
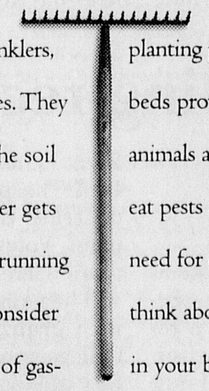
WHY ORGANIC GARDENING ISN'T JUST A BUNCH OF MANURE.

Organic gardening is a lot more than natural fertilizer. And organic gardens do a lot more than make your yard look pretty. They help make the environment healthier. So let's dig in and see how you can help.



To conserve water, use soaker hoses instead of sprinklers.

The first step to creating an environmentally friendly garden is to compost. Composting not only helps produce the bacteria, nutrients and mulch plants need, it also reduces the amount of solid waste your home creates. Another easy way to help the environment in your garden is to change the tools you use. For instance, instead of using sprinklers, try using soaker hoses. They leak moisture into the soil at slow rates, so water gets absorbed instead of running off. You may also consider using a rake, instead of gas-powered blowers.



Use a rake instead of gas-powered blowers.

Rakes use no fuel and give you some exercise. Next, think about the types of plants you plant. Consider planting perennials. Perennial beds provide refuge for animals and insects that will eat pests and reduce your need for chemicals. Finally, think about planting a tree in your backyard. Trees keep harmful carbon dioxide from entering the atmosphere and create lots of energy-saving shade.

So you see, when we say organic gardens are a good idea, it's no bull.

Over 15% of solid waste could be reduced if everyone who gardens composted.

Local election results in brief

Some quick (and still unofficial) results on local elections from the March 26 primary:

For Congress, 3rd District, incumbent Vic Fazio (D-West Sacramento) held off fellow Democrat Rodger McAfee by a tally of 82 percent to 18 percent.

Facing Fazio in November will be Republican Tim LeFever, who beat Charles Schaupp 69 percent to 31 percent.

In the State Assembly, 8th District, Democrat Helen Thomson earned the right to represent the Democrats by beating Dominic DeBellis 80 percent to 20 percent.

For the Republicans it will be Ed Schlenker, with 32 percent of his party's vote, which gave him the edge over second place Republican Ray Schoch, who had 24 percent.

Thomson and Schlenker will vie for the seat to be vacated by Tom Hannigan, D-Fairfield, when Hannigan steps down following the November general election.

Some of the more notable state ballot propositions, and how they fared:

Prop. 197, to allow sport hunting of mountain lions, was defeated 58 percent to 42 percent.

Prop. 198, to allow open voting in primaries, passed 59 percent to 41 percent.

Prop. 200, to mandate no-fault insurance, lost 65 percent to 35 percent.

Prop. 201, to limit attorney fees, lost 59 percent to 41 percent.

Prop. 202, to limit attornies' contingency fees, fell 51 percent to 49 percent.

Prop. 203, the state school bond measure, passed with 62 percent in favor and 38 percent against.

Incumbent Mike McGowan ran unopposed for the first district Yolo County supervisor's seat, covering most of West Sacramento.

In the fourth district, Dave Rosenberg took 52 percent of the vote to defeat Ian Ekholm, and probably set a Yolo County supervisorial record for most money raised in a campaign while doing it.

And in the fifth district, Lynnel Pollock ran unopposed.

There were no West Sacramento City Council elections.

Countywide, voter turnout was 49.3 percent.

Republicans turned out in greater percentages (57.4%) than Democrats (48.9%) and members of other parties.

West Sacramento voters turned out in the lowest numbers of the county, with 40.5 percent of registered voters making it to the polls.

Turnout in Davis was 54 percent; in Winters, 47.1 percent; in Woodland, 48.9 percent; and in unincorporated areas of the county, 49.6 percent.

Achievement tests coming to Golden State

From Golden State M.S.

Next week, students at Golden State Middle School will be taking the Stanford Achievement Test. The Reading Comprehension portion of the test will take place on Wednesday, April 10; the Math Application portion of the test will take place on; Thursday, April 11.

These S.A.T. tests are very important. They are designed to measure your child's current reading and math skills. These test results will become part of your child's permanent school record. In addition, S.A.T. scores are used to see if students qualify for participation in certain school programs. A copy of your child's test results will be mailed to you.

During the past few weeks, teachers have been working hard to help prepare students for these important tests. Students will take these tests in their regular English and math classes.

The following are five things that you can do to make sure that this achievement test accurately reflects the best work that your child can do:

1. Please talk with your child before the S.A.T. test. Encourage your child to take the test seriously and to do his or her best on the test.

2. Please urge your child to use all of the allowed time to work on test items. Some test questions may be difficult. Tell your child not to give up.

3. Pleas make sure that your child comes to school on April 10 and 11. It is also important that your child be at school on time.

4. Please make sure that your child gets a good night's sleep the night before each test. A healthy breakfast and lunch will also help your child do his or her best.

5. Please talk with your child after the test. Praise your child for putting forth his/her best effort.

If your child is very sick on the day of the test, he or she should stay home from school and we will arrange for him/her to make-up the test. However, please do not schedule routine doctor or dental appointments for your child on test days.

Demo: using recycled paint to combat graffiti

From the Department of Public Works and Transportation Yolo County

The Yolo County Department of Public Works and Transportation will be conducting a recycled paint demonstration project on Wednesday, March 27, at 1 p.m. in the City of Woodland. This press event will demonstrate the use of recycled paint. Volunteers from the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce will be painting a wall, covered with graffiti, at the corner of College and North Streets in the City of Woodland.

This press event is also designed to bring attention to the many interior and exterior uses of recycled paint as well as bring attention to the countless hours of volunteer work from members of the Woodland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce on the year round graffiti cleanup projects in Woodland. A new hotline to report graffiti has been established. Please call 669-2557 or dial NO WALLS.

The Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has used more than 300 gallons of recycled paint for graffiti cleanup projects, received from household hazardous waste collection events, sponsored by Yolo County, over the last four years.

Any residents or businesses interested in purchasing recycled paint please contact the County at 757-5566. Recycled paint is less expensive than new paint and is of equal quality. Recycled paint is 100 percent post consumer, comes in several colors, as well as interior and exterior varieties.

The next household hazardous waste collection event for residents is on May 18.

Lookin' for some live action? It's a great day to see a play!

Pheasant Hollow on agenda

Although Lewis Homes and the city of West Sacramento are still at odds over a couple of development conditions, the city council voted 4-0 last week to direct staff to pave the way for the company's Pheasant Hollow to begin construction.

The development plans over 90 housing units, in addition to an eight-acre future commercial site, near Higgins Rd. and Jefferson Blvd.

In 1995, the city council reversed a planning commission decision to allow the development to proceed. The council's decision was based on a concern that the new homes would put additonal traffic on Jefferson before a second bridge was built over the barge canal -- a practice which the city general plan prohibits.

Citing the developer's data concerning new bus service to the area, and the developer's intention to provide a "park and ride" center at the future commercial acreage, a Yolo County judge ordered West Sacramento to re-evaluate its decision.

sion from West Capitol Ave. to Sacramento Ave. The project involved adding additional lanes to the stretch of road, and entailed countless delays and posed hardships to Harbor Blvd. businesses trying to keep their doors open while construction discouraged customers.

"I drove by there the other day and it's almost finished," Potnick said.

■ Construction of the Palamidessi Bridge is still scheduled to begin this year. Special tax districts are being set up to pay for the bridge and related projects, and negotiations continue between the city and the Port of Sacramento to finalize the port's contribution to the project.

Also on the positive side, said Potnick, is the fact that the port is willing to deed over the land needed for a right-of-way for the bridge even though these negotiations aren't complete.

"This means the construction won't be stalled," said Potnick.

■ West Sacramento's riverfront may see the first step towards urbanization.

The company plans an office headquarters of over 300,000 square feet in the "Raley's Landing" development north of the Tower Bridge. If construction proceeds, the project will be the city's first success in years of trying to land an office project to start its planned downtown riverfront area.

The plant uses chlorine to kill bacteria in the sewage as part of the treatment process, before the effluent is discharged into the Sacramento River near Clarksburg. The chlorine is supposed to be removed afterwards, because it, too, is a pollutant and can kill fish and other organisms in the river.

"They had some problems with the chlorination/dechlorination system," related Robert Yeardon, senior engineer for the state's regional water control board. "It looks like it might be metering stuff and problems with the way chlorine's being measured. They're not sure if the meters were reading right, and we told their people to figure it out and give us a technical report."

State officials will meet with city staff members and their consultants tomorrow.

The state has fined West Sacramento several hundred thousand dollars in the past few years due to procedural violations at the plant.

Mayor Potnick stressed Tuesday that "we'll do everything we can to comply with the (previous) cease and desist orders" from the state.

State engineer Yeardon said no immediate plans have been made by his agency to pursue additional penalties against the city.

Meanwhile, West Sacramento is still "considering" whether to pipe its future sewage wastes across the river for treatment by the county of Sacramento instead of building a new West Sacramento treatment plant in Southport, said Potnick.

Although the two sides are not actively negotiating over the costs of such a contract, Sacramento has presented West Sacramento with a price rate list which West Sacramento initially dismissed as too expensive. But the issue is not dead.

"They provided us with a letter of cost estimates, so that is being considered as part of the EIR (environmental impact report) on alternatives to a new wastewater treatment plant," said Potnick.

A new West Sacramento treatment plant posed for the Gregory Ave. area of Southport has drawn vocal resistance from neighbors of the site, who want to see it built elsewhere -- or not at all, if Sacramento County can take over West Sacramento's sewage treatment needs.

The Gregory Ave. site area was chosen because it is a low spot in the city's geography, and it would be relatively easy to pipe in wastes from other areas.

"The fact of the matter is we need expanded wastewater treatment facilities," said Potnick. "If we have it in West Sacramento, the best spot is the quadrant (near Gregory Ave.) identified in the plans because of its low elevation, which would literally save millions of dollars in pumping costs."

But Potnick added that "a decision has not been made," and he didn't expect the issue of whether or where to build a new treatment plant to come before the city council before the fall.

The EIR on the proposal has drawn intense concern from water users downstream, who are concerned about emissions from the new plant. The new plant is intended to help handle millions of gallons of wastewater from a planned newspaper recycling plant as well as other city wastes.

The EIR must address these concerns before it is finalized in order to minimize the chance of a lawsuit from these downstream water users later.

"Every time one of these users, through their lobbying efforts, raises a concern, we have to answer it," explained Potnick. "The EIR requires that we solicit testimony and hold a series of public hearings, and then the council will make a decision."

City officials expect its current treatment plant -- already the site of troubled operations -- to become completely inadequate as the city faces future growth.
